FOUR SONS ENTER LEGAL PROFESSION—STORY FROM THE MAIL AND KMPIRE, TORONTO

The younger two of four strapping boys who never got spanked justified the treatment here a few days ago by graduating with honors from as a great profession of law.

The father, M. K. Langdon, of Brighton, used to be a school teacher out west, in Macleod, Alberta, Victoria, B.C., and other centres. He was a pretty good school teacher, too, having trained at the universities of Toronto and of Manitoba. But he had always had a yearning for the law, not only as a great profession, but as

THE MOOD OF DESPAIR

It is quite possible for a man to spend altogether too much time with books. Much study, as the writer of Ecclesiastes remarked, is a weariness of the flesh. Still, keeping in constant.

It is rather instructive, in this connection, to compare the modern viewpoint with the viewpoint of such a writer as Charles Dickens.

Ideas for Serving Unexpected Guests

BY EDWINA NOLAN

Director of Home Service, General Electric Refrigeration Department ALL housewives at some time or other have experienced that sinking feeling when unexpected guests arrived at the dinner hour, on a day when nothing special was planned for the table. If the guests stayed to dinner, it was a case of their "taking pot luck" or of having someone dash quickly to the corner grocery or delicatessen.

But thanks to new ideas new

But, thanks to new ideas, new recipes and modern facilities for food preservation, a simple family meal may be transformed into a gala affair in short order. Here are some of the ways of doing it:

Start the meal "with a bang."
That is, have an appetizer of some hors d'oeuvres or a canape or a tomato juice cocktail, served icy cold. Any of these will add a touch of festivity and the supplies for them may be kept easily on hand in the refrigerator.

Garnish the soup you were planning with some whipped cream and finely minced parsley or chopped pimento, which it is possible to keep for two weeks without molding in a covered jar in a modern refrigerator.

Pinch off some of those "re-frigerator rolls," let them rise and bake them at the last min-ute.

Dress up your salad course as follows: While the rolls are baking, roll out some pastry, sprinkle with salt or grated cheese, cut into sticks or "straws," bake in the same oven. Make cream or grated American cheese into balls and roll in chopped olives, minced parsley of nuts.

Then make one of the quickly prepared frozen desserts.

These preparations can be made

These preparations can be made in very little time; and, as a matter of fact, while the hostess is chatting with her guests. And they add so much to the success of the meal.

BUSINESS IS GOOD

Every Albertan knows that successful factories mean prosperity to the community in which they are situated. Every Albertan wants to see Alberta developed into an even greater manufacturing province. Possessing all the natural resources necessary to successful manufacturing, there is no reason why this commendable desire should not be abundantly realized in Sunny Alberta.

A factory, however, can only be successful when there is a steady and sufficient demand for the products it makes. The people of Alberta must do their part in building the factories of the Province by purchasing, whenever possible, products Made-on-Alberta soil in preference to importations.
